Portrait Painter Of Texas Commissioned To Paint The Big Three Douglas Chandler, portrait painter of Weatherford, Texas, has been commissioned to paint the Big Three of World War II—the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Winston Churchill and Joseph Stalin. Chan-der announced the assignment to the Dallas News from Miami Beach, where he started the Churchill portrait.

The late President Roosevelt discussed the painting with him only a few days before his sudden death, Chandler said. President Truman wrote Mr. Churchill and Premier Stalin requesting their co-operation, he added. Chandler plans to go to Moscow to paint Premier Stalin and then add the Big Three into a historical canvas, with the Yalta conference scene as the background.
The finished work will hang in the Capitol at Washington.

The only two continents on which certain kinds of birds have become extinct in historic times are Australia and America.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

LEADING LADY

By MARION BOUCHER

DAN is really a dear and I'd rather have him for a husband than Charles Boyer himself, but sometimes he is terribly forgetful. It was unpardonable of him to forget about the play.

We were having breakfast that morning when he calmly announced:
"Won't be home for dinner tonight, Doris. I'm going to see Ferris at last about that advertising contract.
I won't be home here for the rest of the evening but he seemed to have other plans. Anyway, I am taking him to dinner and we'll be able to discuss matters."

"And that's what you intend to do tonight Dan Crawford?" I asked in an icy tone.

"Why yes, hon, why not?" Dan gulped down the last of his coffee and looked at me with an innocent air which I found very aggravating.

"When I didn't say a word, he continued: 'You know it's weeks since I've been trying to see Ferris and yesterday I finally got hold of him.
Sure hope I can swing the deal.'"

"But tonight's our Little Theatre play!" I protested. "Dan, how could you forget? Or maybe you can't be bothered with it, maybe you don't want to see me at."

"Doris, so help me, it slipped my mind completely. I was so anxious to see Ferris that I didn't think of anything else. I do want to see your play, but, gosh, I don't see how I can now. Perhaps if we get through early, . . . but you'd better not count on it."

Oh, but you must be there!" I insisted in tears. "What will people think if you aren't? I do see how you could be so thoughtless as to forget about my play."

"I don't see how I forget either when that's all I've heard you talking about lately." Dan was angry too.
"And by the way, I am darn glad it will be over tonight. I am going pretty tired of coming home to a cold supper, with you rushing off to rehearsals every night."

"Why, Dan, you know you're exaggerating. It hasn't been every night. Of course you have to rehearse a lot when you're in a play."

I knew I was playing my part well.

but I thought you were proud that I was given the lead.
"I am going to be late for my bus," Dan muttered and hurried away without even saying goodbye. I watched him stride down the walk and couldn't prevent a few tears spilling over. We don't quarrel very often and I always feel badly when we do.

But to think he'd forgotten all about the play! Our Little Theatre Club had been shivering over it for weeks and I was so anxious for Dan to see it. I was the leading lady and Mr. Milford, our director, who didn't hand out many compliments, had told me that I played my part very well.

"Although," he had added critically, "you could put a little more fire in it."

I felt a little guilty when I thought what Dan had said about cold suppers. Perhaps I had neglected him a bit lately. I had been so absorbed in the play. And now here he was this stupid quarrel!

I picked up the breakfast dishes and went mechanically about the housework. All day I kept thinking uneasily of Dan. I didn't expect him home at noon, as he always has lunch down town, but I kept hoping he'd phone. The day went by without a word from him.

"Very well, Mr. Crawford!" I thought angrily as I got ready to go to the theatre that evening. "If you don't care about my activities I can get along quite nicely without you.
Other people appreciate my talents." Hated! I often been told that I should have gone on the stage? Well, I might try!

Perhaps it was my anger which helped me play my role with more than my usual spirit and dash. After the first act, I knew the play was going to be a success, knew too that I was playing my part well. I was so excited and happy I almost forgot Dan and the quarrel we had had almost, but not quite. Secretly, I wished that he were there to share my little triumph.

The play was over although the audience was still applauding heartily.
"That chipping is really for you, Mrs. Crawford," Mr. Milford said graciously to me. "You certainly put enough spirit into your role tonight." There were other compliments but suddenly my success turned to ashes.
I didn't care about the play any more—I was thinking of Dan. Slowly I began to remove my grease paint.

"Hurry up, Doris!" It was another girl in the cast speaking to me.
"We're going to have a party to celebrate our success."

"Sorry, but Doris is coming with me."

Was it really Dan's voice? I whirled around. Yes, there was.

"You were great, hon. I was so proud of you!"

"But, Dan?" I murmured. "Have you been here all evening? What about Ferris?"

"Of course I've been here all evening and Ferris was with me. He's very anxious to meet you. You know, it was a funny thing. After dinner I decided to tell him that I had to get away—explained that my wife was taking part in a play and I wanted to see it. And that was exactly what he wanted to do! He's very keen about dramatics and had tickets for this play so we came together."

"Did you get the contract?" I asked.

"Yes and I think you helped me put the deal over. Ferris didn't say much all during dinner but he just told me a few minutes ago that it was okay. Guess it was because he was so impressed with your acting!"

"Oh, Dan, I am sure that's not the reason but I am so glad!" Then I called out to the others. "Sorry, folks, but I am not joining the party—I am going with my husband.
From now on I am going to concentrate on being his leading lady!"

Few Practice It

Hari-Kari Is Very Seldom Committed

By Amy Jagan

This curious attitude by the sacred called hari-kari, is what might be called a fake, says the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette. It is pretty much phony. The tradition is held up to the rank and file as a grand old Japanese custom in which great leaders showed off their complete devotion to the emperor.

The fact is that hari-kari was rarely committed by top ranking leaders and only occasionally by second raters. It was something for leaders to preach about but they didn't often practice the doctrine.

You will notice that Tojo used a zui and made a batch of it, and Prince Kameyama took poison. Most of the "merry" leaders just go to jail in the line with pay, an exceptional reward to the hangerman.
In short, hari-kari is more of an idea than a practice.
